

TransAct is led by Mary Ann Robinson, a seasoned professional with a successful track record of profitable business ownership. Mary Ann founded TransAct, a merchant service company that delivers personalized merchant/credit card services to businesses, in 2010 after sub-contracting for other merchant service providers.

Mary Ann is passionate about effectively representing her clients and the financial needs of their business. As a former Senior Business Analyst for the Electronic Data Interchange, NACHA, and ACH financial processing standards for a major health insurance company, her expertise lies in communicating and consistently bridging businesses owners with the latest technology. She has years of experience working with companies of all sizes in varied markets, and understands the value, processes, advantages and disadvantages of establishing credit card processing procedures for businesses.

Mary Ann's business experience began at a very young age when her parents opened the doors to Robinson's Fine Candies out of a small retail location in Rocky Hill, New Jersey. The family worked together to build the business from the ground up over several decades and became one of the preeminent users of merchant account and credit card processing services.

Mary Ann graduated cum laude from the University of Scranton with a B.S in Computer Science. She also holds an MBA in finance and human resources from Drexel University. Mary Ann is, or has been, involved in leadership positions with the following associations:

National Association of Women Business Owners (NAWBO), Greater Philadelphia Chapter, BNI, Doylestown Chapter, BNIDVR Staff member, Board of Education for St. John the Baptist School
